To compare the excretion of plasma citrulline (Cit) and plasma arginine (Arg) in healthy newborn infants and infants with intestinal dysfunction. Cit and Arg were measured in the plasma of healthy preterm infants (n = 45) and those with intestinal dysfunction (n = 22). Infants with intestinal dysfunction excreted significantly more Cit than the preterm infants (0.38 +/- 0.09 mumol/min/kg vs 0.25 +/- 0.07 mumol/min/kg; mean +/- SD; P Do people think that meat is becoming more like cheese? When it comes to treating meat like dairy, people's attitudes have changed recently, according to a new study in the journal Appetite. For decades, meat was treated as a side dish, not a standalone item. This is changing, but the people we asked for their opinions have opinions on the trend to pair meat with dessert. The study asked over 2,000 people to rate whether or not it is becoming more common to see meat being served at the end of a meal, for example, as part of a dessert. When people responded, they weren't very optimistic. While the general feeling was that meat should be served as 82157476af
